BASED ON CCFUP 2023 & NEP 2020

Semester II

MDC02T Gender Studies

3 credits

CO1: Students will gain an understanding of gender as a social construct and be able to distinguish it from biological sex, understanding the ways in which gender roles and expectation are culturally and socially defined.

CO2: Students will gain the ability to analyse the impact of gender as a social construct on individual identity, social interactions, and institutional practices, exploring how it influences behaviours, roles and opportunities.

CO3: Students will gain an understanding of gender-based discrimination occurring both in family settings and in the workplace.

CO4: Students will learn extensively about the foundational concepts of caste, class, race, sexuality, religion, ability, and disability, and how these social categories intersect and influence individual and collective experiences. Students will be able to analyse the historical and contemporary impact of these intersecting identities on access to resources, opportunities, and experiences of discrimination and privilege within various social, economic, and political contexts.

CO5: Students will learn about the historical evaluation and key phases of the women’s movement in India, including major milestones, figures, and events that have shaped its development. They will also learn about the social political and economic factors that have influenced the goals and strategies of the women’s movement in India.

CO6: Students will also be introduced to discussions of various forms of gender-based violence (GBV), including physical, sexual, cyber abuse. They will also gain familiarity with the legal framework, policies and, support systems available for victims of GBV.
